Samuel L. Jackson and Dominic Cooper to star in "Reasonable Doubt"

Stockholm, 2012-10-05 00:35 CEST (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- The production of "Reasonable Doubt", formerly "The Good Samaritan", is scheduled to start in Canada on November 19. Samuel L. Jackson and Dominic Cooper ("The Devil's Double", "My Week with Marilyn") have been signed for the lead roles. Casting continues for other roles, through Candice Elzinga Casting.

"Reasonable Doubt" is written by Peter Dowling ("Flightplan") and will be directed by Peter Howitt ("Sliding Doors"). Voltage Pictures handles international sales.

The film is a co-production between Paradox Entertainment, South Creek Pictures, and Bavariapool. Producers are Fredrik Malmberg and Daniel Wagner of Paradox Entertainment, Dave Valleau of South Creek Pictures, and Silvio Muraglia and Frank Buchs of Bavariapool. John Ptak is executive producer.

After a fatal hit and run, up-and-coming assistant District Attorney Mitch Brody must prosecute a man for the crime he committed. Mitch does his best to throw the case, and is successful when some inconclusive evidence arises. Following the trial, Mitch quickly realizes that he may not have been responsible for the accident and finds himself struggling to hunt the man he got acquitted.
